

The Great Earth Mother

When you spend time in nature, the air, the earth, and the sunlight soothe the soul. This week we hiked along a rugged trail that runs beside the sea. As we strolled we attended an online seminar with Byron Kate, whose love and respect for people inspires us to practice continuous improvement in our own training sessions. Occasionally we stopped to admire the view and breathe in the soft breezes coming in from the Mediterranean.

When we arrived back home we could see our lives in a new perspective. Our eyes were soft and our hearts open. We have made it a ritual to spend time with Mother Nature as we contemplate higher, lighter states of awareness.

Your Own Business

Oxford University published a study estimating that nearly 50% of all jobs will disappear within the next few decades. That means that most of us will be looking for a new way to earn a living. Since technology is taking over jobs in virtually every field of endeavor, there will soon be billions of unemployed people looking for positions that no longer exist.

At Sage we created a training business in which we asked our clients, "What do you want?" We expected them to talk about happiness, well-being, and relationship. To our surprise, one after another described how hard it was to earn a decent living and to feed and house their families. To meet their needs we became players in the game of lean start-up entrepreneurship.

Exploitation is a mean game, so we evolved beyond crony capitalism in order to assist people to practice fair exchange and generosity in their careers. By putting people ahead of profits we pioneered a compassionate form of free agent entrepreneurship.

Business is a challenging game. We win by assisting one another. Those who protect and serve earn trust, which accrues prosperity over the span of their career.

It's Not About You

High integrity people do what is necessary to earn money because they want to share their time and talent for the benefit of others who are less fortunate. Buddha was a wealthy prince. But when he saw the suffering of others he gave up his inheritance and devoted his life to improving the lot of the less fortunate.

Maybe you were born with a silver spoon in your mouth, or perhaps you have lived a life of plenty through the efforts of others. Prosperity is a wonderful thing, as long as it doesn't make you disrespectful of money and of the work ethic of those who seek to strive to improve the economy for the sake of charity and respect for all.

The Spirit of Giving

Einstein ushered in brilliant new perspectives in science. But he never considered himself to be a genius. In his view he was simply a very curious man. Schroedinger brought us the insights that revealed quantum physics. But his greatest love was not knowledge, but rather the mysteries that science would never be able to fully comprehend.

Sage University is a business school for free agents who appreciate the value of entrepreneurship, partnership, and servant leadership. Our coaching culture provides great breakthroughs in the practice of producing prosperity in an economy that can't create jobs. But our true passion is the deep mystery of altruism and cooperation that inspires humans to serve one another, even when there is no payoff other than the joy that comes when we give our best to other people.

Whale Saves Seal

Perhaps you saw the article and photo in the news about a great sperm whale that rushed to the aid of a young seal pup. As a group of Orcas were closing in for the kill, the giant whale rushed from afar, head butted the killer whales, and then rolled over on his back to give the seal a high place to shelter on his belly until the predators gave up and went on their way.

Apparently this kind of selfless behavior is not uncommon among sea creatures. A brief You Tube search will reveal numerous instances of humpback whales rushing to the rescue of seals. Although whales are known to be peaceful, they can be quite fierce when they are protecting their offspring and other helpless sea dwellers from danger.

You can also find many instances of dolphins protecting swimmers from hungry sharks, and even offering folks safe passage through tough seas to get them safely to land. Such behavior reflects the very highest values shared by humans and other mammals. Such altruism doesn't fit the "tooth and claw" version of evolution, revealing the fact that science still has a great many mysteries waiting to be discovered.

Partnerships Available

If you want to become a top coach or trainer you will have to develop new dimensions of compassion that come only from unselfish service. That is why Sage students use pilot projects to work together and cooperate with our team leaders and mentors. Nothing beats "learning by doing", especially when you are creating projects that come from your own heart.

This month we initiated a new ultra-reality talk show with a team in Houston, launched a Sage on Stage tour for the US, edited the next edition of The New Entrepreneurship, advanced the German translation of How to Talk to Men, created a course in Taoism with an Eastern Philosophy scholar, and planned the Justin Case tour with project partners throughout the country. We want to collaborate with you too. Let us know what you want.

Advanced Communication

SAGE ON STAGE

Chautauqua (October 08.-23rd)

Chautauqua is an American Indian word for CELEBRATION

Sage is offering 3 exciting performance events in October for people who love stage and film.

Every life and every business has high and low times. Sometimes you have to step back from the pressures of life and give yourself over to celebration. We are offering several music, stage, and film events, all designed to restore your natural childlike appreciation and tap into the sense of awe that is the hallmark of free agent entrepreneurship.

October 8-9: The Chautauqua Music Festival

Here you turn up the music for a 2-day music live event that highlights you and your associates onstage in a concert designed to raise the energy of your stage presence. You will play as a performer, a producer, a backup band, and an audience member. Together we will work as a team to produce all the force of an authentic festival that you will be able to reproduce in your own performance courses and musical events.

October 11-16: Performing Arts

Theater, Burlesque, Vaudeville, Dance, Music, Mime, Acting, Improve, Comedy—all of these skills improve your public speaking and add to your ability to move an audience. The Sage Method brings new life to these aspects of self-expression. It transcends traditional Method Acting by tapping into the element of surprise, where you discover the true character that lives behind the roles you play. Spend this week with us and you will find yourself in an entirely new reality onstage.

October 18-23: Media and Film School

As the Industrial Age and the era of the knowledge worker give way to smart machines, a new Service Age is being born. Every business is the entertainment business. This innovative Experience Economy requires new skills that you can use to share your products and services through authentic audio and video presentations on the Internet. Facebook and You Tube are only the beginning. Your screen image will determine your success and prosperity within the next decade. Join us for this week of film and media training as we create film clips that will launch the next level of your career. Together we will create innovative training films, music videos, comedy sketches, vignettes, and attractive videos that will enable you to share your life and career with fans worldwide.
